What We See Happening Around Us

Every person who has ever lived has experienced perceived changes during their lifetime. There are changes that appear to take place in our environment, and there appear to be societal changes as well. How the two affect each other is a complex study nevertheless, they are interrelated in many ways. What if someone told you that despite the perception of change, not much has actually changed not only recently, but even throughout history? We all gage our perception of change from what we see, hear, and feel in the here and now. After all, the lives we live take place in the here and now, however, we oftentimes lose touch with the past thereby making everything we experience in our lifetime appear to be unique, or as something new or different from what people have experienced in the relative past. Is this true... are we living in a unique time that no one else can relate to? The answer is Yes... and No! There are many ways to view our existence as human beings; we can view it from the Physical Realm, and from the Spiritual Realm. Likewise, relating to time, we can look at life from the perspective of the past, the present, or the future. Some groups of people acknowledge one form of existence rather than the other; however, the truth is that our existence is comprised of all the above mentioned. Two of the main things that affect our perception are our knowledge and understanding of what is going on around us. The following passage tells us that things are not always as unique as they may seem. It alludes to the fact that there is a way to find out about what we experience in life; it is through knowledge, but knowledge of what?

Ecclesiastes 1:9-10 (NKJV)

⁹ That which has been is what will be, That which is done is what will be done, And there is nothing new under the sun. ¹⁰ Is there anything of which it may be said, "See, this is new"? It has already been in ancient times before us.

This passage says it all! For years, when my Children and Grand Children were in school, I told them over, and over, that History is the most important subject at any grade level. Not going into all the positive ramifications of knowing history, the simple point here is that history always seems to repeat itself thereby making it very predictable, therefore an excellent teacher. This in turn makes it clear that the time we live in is not as unique as it sometime seems to be. It does not mean that each generation is a carbon copy of the one before it; it simply means that the behavior of humanity in general has been consistent throughout history. This, contrary to popular belief, is also true concerning our environment. Our planet also goes through cycles repeated for thousands of years. The reason there is so much hype these days concerning “Climate Change” is that people simply ignore history! Throughout history, our planet has endured heating and cooling in regular cycles, this is a verifiable fact. The reports of man causing global warming ignore things such as high temperature records that were set sometimes hundreds of years before the “Industrial Revolution” which is blamed for all the “Greenhouse Gases” supposedly ultimately responsible for climate change! People, especially those lacking this knowledge of the past, are very easily manipulated into believing there is a crisis that in reality does not exist. We are merely seeing climate history repeating itself. I can recall just a few years ago when a “Left Wing Politician” made the comment (on national TV), “We can’t let a good crisis go to waste!”

He was referring to political tactic of creating a “Crisis” as it is a good way to get what you want, or steer people’s thinking by generating fear and urgency. This in turn forces people to make uneducated and hasty, sometimes foolish decisions. This is again a “Political Tactic,” and too many people are falling for it because they believe everything they see and hear from news sources that are in fact political allies of the groups creating the (False) crisis. Additionally, most people are too lazy to do any research on their own, making themselves easily swayed. They saturate themselves with “Propaganda” rather than facts. Satan also uses lies and deception to manipulate man, and many (not all) politicians (on both sides) are obviously his disciples. This based on the fact that many of their beliefs and goals are opposed to the Word of God.

Changes in What We Call Science

Science was always one of my favorite subjects and it still is! However, one thing I have personally noticed over the years is the fact that science has been getting more and more “Political,” while getting less and less “Scientific.” Science is supposed to be based on observable evidence that can be verified or proven valid, at least that is the way it was explained to me many years ago. However, what is currently considered as science today, is more often than not based solely on theory also known as speculation! Most of what you see and hear concerning “science” these days, is nothing more than a series of statements worded in such a way as to make a particular theory sound more plausible without providing any proof or verifiable evidence at all! A good example of this is some of the programs on television concerning things such as “The Ancient Alien Theory.” The producers of these programs are for the most part Atheists who in reality are simply pushing their own false religion, as they never offer any verifiable evidence or facts to support what they say. For example, I challenge you to watch one of these programs and count how many times you hear phrases such as the following: It is believed ... Some have said... Could it be... Maybe it is because... These are manipulative questions used to steer your thoughts towards their un-verifiable theories. This is not science, it is however pure and simple manipulation of your mind! These questions are intended to confuse you and make you question or doubt the facts, moving you towards what amounts to someone else’s fantasy or a yet unexplained myth or legend.

In addition to this there are other so-called “scientists” telling us of events that supposedly took place 50 or more million years ago (which is long before man existed whether you believe the Bible or the “Big Bang Theory.”) They detail what took place during the formation of the universe, the events leading up to it and the mysterious never explained forces that caused it all to happen! They continue by detailing the formation of the earth coming from gas and dust, then they tell us how life spontaneously came into existence, by random chance, ignoring the complexity of D.N.A. and the fact that everything pertaining to life is in Perfect Order! How can anyone possibly know these things, even if the world was in fact a mere million years old? It is not possible, and none of these speculations are able to be proven scientifically.

Scientists themselves state that the Law of Thermodynamics affects all things and that all things eventually go from a state of order to a state of disorder, not the other way around. This contradicts both The Big Bang Theory and The Theory of Evolution! Considering this and the other claims of these so-called scientists; what are the chances of what they claim being true or happening as they claim? Let us once again look at the theory that Ancient Aliens from another Galaxy visited early man on the earth and not only experimented on them but gave them much of the knowledge that got us to where we are today technologically. Before you imagine this to be possible in your mind, consider the following: The very first radio transmission by a man named, Marconi took place in 1901 that is 118 years before the year of this writing. Scientists claim that the nearest Galaxy to ours is somewhere around 25000 Light Years away. Radio waves travel at the speed of light so any hint of humankind, and its existence on earth will take another 24882 years from now (2019) to reach the nearest Galaxy. If some advanced civilization by chance came across it, it would sound like the typical background noise of space if they could hear it at all. The big question in this scenario is, “why would these ancient aliens pick our little planet to look at or visit as opposed to all the other faint little dots in the heavens visible on a clear night? Nevertheless, when people watch programs that proclaim this nonsense they tout it as fact. Ironically, if the aliens hear us in 24882 years and send an immediate reply it will take another 25000 years to reach the earth. There are many scientists (and politicians), that claim that we are destroying the planet and we will cease to exist within another 12 years or so. This means, according to these modern scientists, we will have been non-existent for 49870 years before the answer reaches where the earth once was. If you choose to believe the “scientists” and deny the Biblical account of creation, go for it... As for me, the creation story out of the Bible makes a whole lot more sense as it points to intelligent design, which more and more true scientists are acknowledging opposed to the theory of random chance over millions or billions of years. I personally like the way the Amplified Bible rendered the following passages concerning man’s so-called wisdom.

Romans 1:20-22 (AMP)

²⁰ For ever since the creation of the world His invisible nature and attributes, that is, His eternal power and divinity, have been made intelligible and clearly discernible in and through the things that have been made (His handiworks). So [men] are without excuse [altogether without any defense or justification], ²¹ Because when they knew and recognized Him as God, they did not honor and glorify Him as God or give Him thanks. But instead they became futile and godless in their thinking [with vain imaginings, foolish reasoning, and stupid speculations] and their senseless minds were darkened. ²² Claiming to be wise, they became fools [professing to be smart, they made simpletons of themselves].

In conclusion, the things we perceive as change are for the most part a repeat of what people in the past have experienced. If we choose to ignore the past, we put ourselves at a disadvantage because it is much easier to follow an existing path regardless of how old it is than to blaze a new trail. I believe that the Bible tells us all we need to know. As the passage above illustrates, God makes clear if you truly consider His creation. Those who reject God try to explain our existence with their foolish thoughts and theories eventually revealing themselves to be fools.

In Part 2 of this series we will look into the social and moral changes we see in our world.
